EXPLANATORY NOTES

Irregularities in Spelling

These names were taken from the files of the County Clerk of Woodford County, Illinois, and were in all cases written by hand. Some mistakes in spelling may, therefore, be due to illegible penmanship, although every precaution was taken to clear the spelling by checking both the daily record book and the alphabetical register. Another source of error is the fact that the clerk apparently spelled quite frequently by sound and the applicant did not write his own name. In these cases I have attempted to combine all surnames that appear to be the same under the most likely spelling, with cross references to the various other spellings. The most notable examples of this is Eckstein and Schertz.

The reader will have to use common sense and considerable imagination in tracing variations in spelling if the name looked for does not appear under the spelling to which he is accustomed.

Licenses Issued but Not Returned

In many instances, licenses issued were never returned to the office of the County Clerk. Ordinarily, I should say this would indicate that one or the other of the contracting parties decided to call the marriage off. However, this may not be true in every instance, but may be due to carelessness on the part of the officiating minister, as in one case a license was returned by the minister after forty years or more. I have, therefore, included these names in the list, but the date is, of course, the date on which the license was issued rather than the date of marriage, since no proof exists that the marriage was performed. A notation is made concerning this irregularity in each case.

Method of Listing

All marriages are listed alphabetically under both names; under the man's name first, followed by the same list arranged under the names of the brides.

the first of the year 1774, the British government, in order to prevent the colonies from obtaining the goods which they had been accustomed to import from the West Indies, had passed an act, which prohibited the importation of such goods into the colonies, unless they were first shipped to some port in the British West Indies, and then re-shipped to the colonies. This act was very unpopular in the colonies, and was one of the causes which led to the outbreak of the American Revolution.
